NEW ENGLAND AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of the New England Agricultural Society will be held at No. 40 Milk street, Boston, on TUESDAY, Feb. 1, 1887, at 11 o'clock A.M.

DANIEL NEBRAM, Secretary.

Boston, January 11, 1887.

MEETING OF FARMERS.

There will be a meeting of Farmers in the Hall of the Ploughmen Building, 45 Milk street, Boston, Jan. 29, 1887. Subject for discussion, "Care and Management of the Horse." Mr. Daniel Stiles of Middleton, will lead.

The annual meeting of the New England Agricultural Society, as heretofore announced, will be held on the Tuesday next, February 1, in the Hall of the Ploughmen Building, No. 40 Milk street. A full attendance is anticipated. The customary business of the Society will be transacted. Never did the New England Society stand so broad and solid a foundation as now. It is with the great body of the farmers of this section, their agent and their faithful representatives. No society ever performed such effective service by affiliating and co-operating with local associations at the right time and in the right place. Its work is appreciated to-day as it never was before. The coming meeting will be one of the utmost importance and interest.

THE FARMERS' MEETING.

THE FARMERS' MEETING of last Saturday to be reported photographically in the current issue of the Ploughman, discussed the highly important subject of the reclamations of Wet and Swamp Lands; and a more instructive treatment of any subject hereto presented to the meeting has not been reported. Mr. Gregory of Marblehead, who led in the discussion, could not address himself to the treatment of any topic related to farming in which his familiarity with it would not manifest itself like that of ones who mastered it. The report of the other speakers will be found in the next issue of the Ploughman. It is wholly the work of Mr. Gregory's discourses. He shows in the most impressive manner what is the permanent value of wet lands and bog lands on a farm, as well as to treat them so that they may be reclaimed at the least cost and at the same time made most productive. The second section forbids the taking of a greater or less compensation from any person than it is to be had from the land and shade house.

The third section prohibits the giving any preference in transportation, and all discrimination in rates and charges.

The fourth and fifth sections cover the long and short hand and the pooling provisions and prohibitions; providing that no bill shall be passed for the creation for a long distance over the same line and in the same direction, and forbidding any combination for the pooling of freights of different and competing railroads.

The sixth section requires that, after ninety days from the passage of the act, schedules of rates, fares, and charges shall be posted up for public inspection, which are to be revised at ten day notices, though they may be reduced with simultaneous notice.

This is to say that of a Good Baby.

The foreign scenes are fine, and instructive to older persons. The Panay might be called "a dairy" instead. D. Lethbridge & Co., publishers.

WHAT THE INTERSTATE COMMERCE BILL MEANS.

WHAT THE Passage will Secure to the Buyers and Shippers of the United States.

To the Editor Massachusetts Ploughman: It has been hinted by some, and I am afraid has been published in your paper, that the bill will be introduced in Congress, with the object of compelling the United States to restrain Canada from placing a duty on the exportation of fish to the United States.

It is a matter of fact that the bill will not destroy one monopoly and establish another, but will simply allow the two enterprises to compete with each other a fair and impartial basis. In other words, the passage of the Interstate Commerce Bill will not destroy the State of Maine.

The bill will not interfere with the services of the American vessels which have been experienced in the carrying of fish to the United States.

The eighth section provides for the liability of persons injured by the violation of the act.

The ninth section provides for suit and recovery of damages in the United States courts or before the Commission to be created.

The tenth section fixes the maximum of the fine which may be imposed as a penalty for violation of law.

The eleven sections following provide for the Commission, which is to consist of five persons, to be appointed for six years except for the first appointments, at a salary of $7,500 each.

THE MILK PRODUCERS UNION.

A call is made for the funds necessary to organize the New England Milk Producers' Union in a compact and active form, which will require the services of a competent person for several years.

It is a matter of fact that the members of the Association will not await the completion of the organization before making their contributions to the fund.

The members who desire to become members of the Association will be duly credited with their contributions on account of membership fees and dues.

The address of the treasurer is:

GEORGE W. HARRIS, North Andover, Mass.

THE CANADIAN FISHERIES.

Secretary Manning's recent report to Congress on the subject of the Canadian fisheries troubles is exciting a good deal of comment in Washington, and has attracted much attention in the press.

On the subject at the capital it is regarded as altogether without a parallel in official communications of one government respecting another while negotiations on a subject are still pending and unanswered. The New England members of both houses are represented as being greatly gratified with what Mr. Manning says, having become impatient hitherto at what they consider the slow action of the government.

Their answer to the question is that they are to be treated in Canadian waters.

For those who desire to become members of the Association will be duly credited with their contributions on account of membership fees and dues.

The address of the treasurer is:

GEORGE W. HARRIS, North Andover, Mass.

A EUROPEAN WAR.

The belief is rapidly becoming general in Europe that a great war is imminent. France and Germany are both massing their troops on the frontier of their respective countries.

And the most imminent feeling is manifested on the London stock exchange, and in European bourses generally. War rumors are thickening in various quarters. The Eastern question appears to be clearing up and giving precedence to the unmistakable symptoms of an approaching Franco-German conflict.

The actual massing of troops by both countries on the frontier adds greatly to the prevailing apprehension. Mobilization has been ordered, and instructions received as to the routes to be followed.

Emperor William's speech to the Prussian upper chamber, though declaring that the strengthening of the army only diminished the chance of war, is a political farce.

And the fact that Canada in the event of such a conflict, would seize its chance to rid herself of Bismarck's control. In the different Paris journals, the Austrian premier, Count Falakny, the Austrian ambassador to France, and the Bulgarian queen are all of opinion that war is inevitable.

The minister of railways was of the opinion that the treaty of 1818 gave no trading rights to Canadian fishermen.

A sketch of the history of science says the Monthly, in the order in which its leading discoveries have been made, and of its present resources for the further prosecution of truth, it might not be shown how the early ages of scientific inquiry were marked by the predominance of the most extravagant fancies and ambitions, and stimulated researches that were to be read with profit by farmers everywhere.

BOSTON, Jan. 24, 1887.

THE EIGHTH NATIONAL CONVENTION of the American Agricultural and Dairy Association will be held at the Grand Central Hotel, New York City, on the 8th of February.

Mr. Joseph H. Read will preside.

Mr. Read has deserved notable attention in the agricultural world, and to but few persons is it given to discover the operation of any widely acting law.

And the latter announces their disposition to make a call for a meeting of customs to be held in Boston, Jan. 25, 1887.

THE FEELING IN CANADA.

A special despatch from Ottawa to the Boston Advertiser states that the news of the passage of the fisheries retaliatory bill by the Canadian Senate fell like a bombshell in the ministerial circles.

They are to be held in session to-morrow.

And the minister of fisheries, Mr. G. D. B.

charge the opportunists with conspiracy for the downfall of the present cabinet, which is pronounced imminent.

The London Daily News professes to know that there is extreme danger of war. It says that the Duke of Cambridge is alarmed on account of his having heard that Germany is likely soon to sack France to prevent the meaning of the French military movements on the frontier. The Paris houses are agitated, and prices have fluctuated wildly. The houses at Frankfort and Vienna are heavy, with a general relapse in quotations.

THE FISHERIES.

The Senate of the United States passed, by a vote of 46 to 1, the bill reported by Mr. Edmunds from the Foreign Relations Committee, giving to the President power to exclude Canadian and other British vessels, and Canadian fish of all sorts, from American ports.

The spirited debate over the measure was a true manifestation of the strong feeling of resentment toward Great Britain for opposing and upholding Canada.

It was a meeting of Farmers in the Hall of the Ploughmen Building, 45 Milk street, Boston, Jan. 29, 1887. Subject for discussion, "Care and Management of the Horse." Mr. Daniel Stiles of Middleton, will lead.

The Poet's Corner.

REASSURANCE

THROUGH saddest tears I fiercely strove to see
If there was any light—a little ray—
Any poor sign that I should ever be
From my dark path led a clearer way.

FOR the hard yoke press'd harder—I grew sore
With hope deferred and fruitless toil and Loss;

And still staggered with the weight I bore,
I seemed I could no further bear my cross.

The faintness of the way was at my heart;
"Is there more to live for?" now I cried,
"My hopes, my friends, my early naths depart,
And bittter things, I could scarce abide."

And groping in my weariness for rest,
I sought a scenes of generous man's ill.
There were some, those terribly distressed,

Who bore their lot with meek and cheerful will.

I saw the feeble ones in sorrows' flame,
Walking forth with a friend, a comrade,
A tender soul, through one dear
Name.

In instant and stormy submissiveness and serene,

And to myself I said, "If this can bear."

So much with patient mind, why not? I
Why should not a man's life be a day?

Of those who nobly live, yet die daily?"

And a strange power possessed me—entered
With him, and balm his bane,

Replied:

And then I knew it was the Christ within

That courage gave and shielded from evill art.

And so I took my burden up again,

Made strong by a stronger hand than mine,

And learned that every earthly loss and sting
of pain,

By love transfigured, makes a man's live divine.

CHASTENED AND SAN-CIFIED.

BY F. V. N. PAINTER

(The Independent.)

WHERE the Roanoke river makes its way through one of the mountains of Virginia, there is a community of about sixty families, a little world within itself. The country is a picture of beauty, and the hills are precipitous; great boulders lie in the ravines and beside the narrow, gullied roads; and countless little streams dash down them, steep banks, and waterfalls, and lighted caves. In the spring-time, when verdure clothes the heights, with wild and many-colored flowers spring up in solitary beauty, and ferns and mosses grow in the great rocks, the untaught nature awakens subtle emotions and brings us into close sympathy with Nature. As we stand alone, in the quiet of the woods, we seem to listen to the noisy rushing of a solitary stream, we are filled with awe, as if in this presence, containing what is most divine, life, homogeneous, and a sojourn of a day or two in an artless, communistic family is sufficient to become initiated into the thoughts, feelings, and ways of the people. As you sit at the fireside of your small home, or join the family circle around the old-fashioned, blazing hearthstone, the events of a day's life, the joys and the sorrows, will seem to elicit a multitude of details, sounding no less in tragic than in comic elements. And if the visitor has the gift of recognizing clear judgment, he will see the commanding, poetical feeling, under the hand of the mountain, and limits his agricultural efforts to raising an acre of tobacco; and, it may be, the sun, suspicious moonshiners, who have a little hole in the forest, and of whom mountain hollows. But the women, upon whom this primitive life, with its terrible hardships, deeper mists, attract our attention most, are the most interesting. Their gentle faces, looking only the light of culture, the young mother, upon whose features the shadow of sorrow is just beginning to settle, has a look of tenderness and care, the woman in middle age, whom drudging toil has robed of health and hope; and, it may be, one of those angelic natures that like the sun, the furthest become more glorious for their sufferings.

One Sunday afternoon, not long ago, I sat with a talkative denizen of the Cove upon a large log, at which, while the first winter storm was loudly rattling, the beams of a May sun, falling without fervor, had flushed all infinite Nature into temporary repose. An impressive silence, however, reigned over the scene, save upon the conscious hills, where the soul naturally drops into serious reverie, and feels a sadness sympathetic with the depths of life; and, in the gloom, the fathom the mystery of her thoughts had burst into my dream thoughts. After reciting every feature, and dwelling upon the strange, it had made, I said to my companion :

"Who is Hardy? How did Minnie come to marry him? He's a mighty good fellow," he said; "and he makes a good livin' out of his river land; but he was brought up on the Cove, and he don't know any more about real estate than I do."

He was talking, however, with a smile, and when I asked him, "What's the name of the church, or, as it is sometimes more specifically called, the meeting-house? Here are the recteys, the sextons, the organists, the choir, &c., as far as I am concerned, what is known to me?" he stopped, and when I asked him, "What's the name of the church, or, as it is sometimes more specifically called, the meeting-house? Here are the recteys, the sextons, the organists, the choir, &c., as far as I am concerned, what is known to me?" he stopped, and when I asked him, "What's the name of the church, or, as it is sometimes more specifically called, the meeting-house?
